NEWS LETTER FROM STATE DEPARTMENTS

COLUMBUS. — Warning against tetanus as a result of injuries from fireworks preceding and during the Fourth of July celebration was issued by Dr. Walter H. Hartung, director of the State Department of Health. "All wounds due to fireworks or gunpowder are exceedingly dangerous," Dr. Hartung said. "No matter how trivial an injury seems, every person injured should receive a prophylactic injection of tetanus or lockjaw antitoxin within a few hours. Only the simplest first-aid treatment is permissible before taking the patient to a physician." Director Hartung pointed out that it isn't the size of the firearm or the apparent seriousness of the injury that tells the story, and called attention to the fact that General Leonard Wood recovered from a severe wound inflicted when a mortar shell burst inside a gun, exploding it, but that his small grandson died of tetanus which resulted from a small wound caused by a toy pistol.

Announcement that civil service examinations for twenty-three positions in the state's service will be conducted June 29 and 30, and July 1 and 2, in four key cities, Columbus, Toledo, Cleveland and Cincinnati, was made by Chairman W. B. Francis of the Civil Service Commission of Ohio. The positions for which the tests will be held include those of state highway patrolman, clerks, inspector of fruit and vegetables, investigators, janitor and janitress, office assistant and veterinarian. Detailed information may be obtained by writing to the state civil service commission in Columbus.

Henry Ford has donated two complimentary sets of the famous Guffey readers, from which thousands learned to read, to the State library, according to Librarian Paul A. T. Noon. The library's old set was incomplete and nearly worn out. Recently Mr. Ford reprinted the McGuffey books from the primer to the sixth reader.

There were eighty-two claims for industrial fatalities in Ohio filed with the Industrial Commission in April. Superintendent Thomas P. Kearns of the division of Safety and Hygiene, reported. The total number of claims for fatal and non-fatal injuries and occupational disease for the month was 13,389, or 2,682 less than in March and 1,470 less than in April 1935. Mr. Kearns said. The eighty-two fatalities were six less than in April, a year ago.

Prediction that by January 1 the "saturation point" in old age pensions would be reached, with approximately 110,000 pensioners on the rolls, was made by Henry J. Berroddin, chief of the division of aid for the aged. New applications have already dropped about fifty per cent from the peak period. Most of the Ohio residents eligible for old age pensions have applied and by December a near-remnant level should be reached, it was said. No more than a normal two or three per cent increase is expected after the first of the year. At the present time the division is distributing pensions to about 90,000 Ohioans. Requirements under the state law result in the rejection of twenty-eight per cent of all applications received.

During April the estimated number of Ohio real estate foreclosures was 1,229, according to data collected by Secretary of State George S. Myers from sheriff's reports and compiled by the governor's farm and home protective committee in co-operation with Ohio State university. The foreclosures involved ninety-five farms and 1,134 properties classified as residential, business or vacant platted land. Farm foreclosure sale prices averaged 70.99 per cent of the judgment and 84.75 per cent of the valuation, and urban properties 70.06 per cent of the judgment and 72.86 per cent of the valuation. April sales represented a decrease when compared with the previous month and a small increase when compared with the 1,210 foreclosures in April a year ago, according to the data.

A Picture From An Old Album

Here is a reproduction of what at one time was one of the show places in farms in Greene county. It was known for the amount of fruit produced each year and the quality, apples being featured. Just a few of the apple trees can be seen in the foreground as the entire acreage in front of the house was devoted to orchard.

Fifty or more years ago three of the most prosperous farmers of those days erected brick residences, this house being one, the second being known as the Daniel Marshall house, and the third, erected by James Townsley. The latter burned some years ago.

By this time you have completed the description and formed your conclusion just what farm we have pictured. Of course an orchard of fifty years ago would not be found today. However the brick dwelling remains. The house was erected by James Barber and is located on what is known as the Barber road just off the Columbus pike east of town. When the Barber estate was divided the farm was taken over by the son, the late J. C. Barber. A member of the third generation of the Barber family, J. Warren Barber, owns the farm today. At one time James Barber owned several hundred acres in that section of Cedarville Township.

Those present were Ruth Copeland, Martha Jane Turnbull, Louise Jacobs, Ruth Esther Smith, Ella Mae Bahns, Onda Bahns, Rachel Finney, Nancy C. Finney, Pauline Ferguson, Catherine Ferguson, W. Jean Ferguson, Thelma Fawcett, Pauline Wilson and Jean McClellan and Mrs. Wm. Ferguson and Miss Ruth Radford.

The next meeting will be held in the afternoon on Tuesday, July 21.

Edgington will pay a dividend of 25 per cent to fifty stockholders who met their liability assessments. Following settlement in full for the depositors the stockholders asked Mr. Edgington to continue liquidation of the remaining assets of the bank. The result so far is very good indication that the bank should never have been closed.

Two-Third Rule Bone of Contention

One of the contending factors of the Democratic convention in Philadelphia is the dropping of the convention rule requiring a two-third vote to nominate. The Southern states have always insisted on this rule that they could control the conventions. The Farley-Roosevelt forces in the north, east and west have combined to abolish the rule that would make it easier to control the next convention to nominate Franklin D. Roosevelt for a third term. Bitter feeling has developed among southern delegates.

Masons To Observe St. John's Day

At the kind invitation of Rev. C. E. Hill all members of Cedarville Lodge No. 622, F. and A. All Masons please note that the sermon originally set for June 21st, has been changed to June 28th, due to the fact that Communion will be observed in both the Presbyterian and United Presbyterian Churches on the former day. All Masons will meet at the Lodge room in time to proceed to the Church in a body.

FRANK S. BIRD, W. M.,
A. B. CRESWELL, Sec'y.

Color Line Still Southern Factor

A number of delegates from southern states walked out of the Democratic convention Wednesday when a colored Baptist Minister was called upon to open the meeting with prayer. Among the leading southerners to "take a walk" was Sen. Smith, head of the Senate Agriculture Committee, from South Carolina. The Senator says "equal rights politically and socially" calls for office holding and intermarriage between whites and blacks.

Ohio Delinquent Tax Reaches New High

According to a survey made in the state the delinquent taxes in the various counties amounts to the staggering sum of more than $216,000,000. With the collection of this tax and the adoption of the Sheriff report for government reductions there would be no necessity of additional taxes, even the sales tax could be repealed.

GREENE COUNTY MUSEUM WILL OPEN JULY 1ST

The Greene County Museum, East Second and Monroe streets, Xenia, will be opened to the public on Wednesday, July 1st, it is announced by officers of the Greene County Museum Association. The hours of the opening will be from 2 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and from 7 to 9 in the evening. Gifts and loans of various articles of historical interest have been made to the Museum, and these will be on exhibit during the opening.

The property for the Museum was deeded by Miss Emma King of Xenia to the county commissioners for the purpose of preserving and exhibiting to the public such objects and documents as have value from their connection with the history of the county or pioneer life. The educational value of such an enterprise was also a motive in its formation.

The Greene County Museum Association, consisting of members from throughout the county, was organized to carry out these purposes, and under its supervision the building has been remodeled and the various exhibits prepared.

The pioneer Galloway log cabin located on U. S. Highway 68 between Oldtown and Goes was recently acquired by the Museum through a gift, and it is planned to move this cabin, set it up on the Museum property and furnish it in keeping with the times in which it was built. This, it is believed, will be a valuable object lesson in the pioneer life of the county.

Poison Plants Kill Livestock In Ohio

Poisoning of 12 head of cattle on pasture is reported by one veterinarian, in northeastern Ohio, and county agricultural agents in the state that appear to have been due to the animals eating some poisonous plant.

There are only four plants in Ohio which could cause the death of livestock and these are usually not eaten unless the stock is forced by lack of grass or legumes satisfy their hunger with plants which they would not ordinarily eat. The four which are listed as dangerous are water hemlock, white snake-root, wild cherry, and buckeye.

The buckeye is not poisonous except when in one stage of growth. Buckeye sprouts appear to be injurious to livestock. The wild cherry is harmless except when the leaves of the plant have wilted, as may happen if branches of trees are blown down by the wind or if brush are cut and are left lying on the ground. The water hemlock is quite a rank-growing plant which is found on fertile soils, usually where there is plenty of moisture. The plant has a strong odor which repels livestock unless they are quite hungry. All parts of this plant are poisonous and only a small amount has to be eaten to cause death. The water hemlock is as toxic to human beings as it is to animals.

Farmers who want to eradicate the water hemlock from pastures can learn to recognize the plant. The plant's stems are smooth, hollow, and usually much branched. These stems tend to grow erectly. The branches are spaced on the stem so that each is on a different side of the stem than the one above or below it. The leaves are divided several times so that they resemble those of the carrot somewhat. The white flowers are small and are borne in open clusters on the ends of the branches. The seeds are split in two boat-shaped halves which are joined on the flat side.

White snake-root is a native plant which is found most often in wooded pastures, on stream banks, or in fields which have been recently cleared but which have not been plowed. The stems of this plant are slender and usually are divided into several branches. The stems and leaves may be smooth or they may be lightly covered with long, soft hairs. The leaves are fairly slender but may tend to be heart-shaped at the base.

That white flowers of the snake-root are tube-shaped and appear in large, loose clusters which may be on the ends of the branches or in the angles formed by the branches with the stem. The roots of the plant are fibrous so it pulls quite easily.

Both the water hemlock and the white snake-root should be eradicated from pasture lands. They should be destroyed before they go to seed to prevent a new crop from springing up next year. Farmers who are in doubt as to the identity of the plants should send specimens believed to be either of the poisonous varieties to the botany department at Ohio State University for identification or have the county agricultural agent assist in identifying the plants.

Now! Sanitary Protection WITHOUT NAPKINS or BELTS

Here, at last, is a sanitary protection that does away with pads, napkins and belts
... that brings more freedom to modern women ... a new method that is completely invisible, and so comfortable that there is no consciousness of wearing a sanitary protection at all!

Physicians approve this hygienic new method ... women everywhere who have adopted B-ettes agree that they are more comfortable, and permit greater personal daintiness than any sanitary protection ever before devised.
